To Whom It May Concern:

This letter is to summarize our evaluation of Alex Ellis based on his initial test day in driving one of our Formula BMW race cars at the Shannonville Fabi circuit on June 26, 2008.

Having previously driven only professional karts and Formula V, I was quite impressed with Alex's level of confidence, natural ability and car control. It was obvious that leading up to the test, he had practiced it many times in his mind. He was quite determined to set some good laps and wasted no time to beat the other driver who had tested with us for three days before.

Alex displayed the characteristics of a driver who can hustle a car around the track. This means that he has a controlled aggressive style and can get up to speed very quickly. This is typically a race winning style that only needs some refinement through pre-season test sessions like the ones we typically organize over the winter. It is always easier to 'tame' the fire in a driver as opposed to trying to get one out of him! It is also a benefit that Alex has a good understanding of how the car works and he is willing to listen to proper instruction that will help him go faster.

By coupling Alex's traits of car control and confident driving with our team's experience in developing a refined technique and a technical understanding of a race car, we can definitely obtain winning results.

It is no surprise to me to hear the recent news that Alex was selected as a BMW Junior for the 2009 Formula BMW Americas season. This is a great accomplishment that only a select group of talented drivers achieve every year. The BMW Junior nomination will help put Alex in the international media spotlight. The partial support that he will receive as a result is only a small portion of what Alex will need to cover a successful season with our team.

If you require any additional information regarding our evaluation of Alex or what our team has to offer, please feel free to contact me directly.

Sincerely,
